

Numerology and Relationship

Linda Bruce

When it comes to fine-tuning a good relationship that could use a little rejuvenation or repair, numerology has some unique clues. When you see the specific core elements that attract you to each other, you've got a better chance of keeping them fresh and exciting. It's much less frustrating when you know where to focus your efforts.

Numerology has answers and insights on what motivates each of you, what lengths you will go to in order to preserve your relationship, and how well you set and achieve your goals. Compatibility shows up very clearly in the pairing of your inner values with the outer personality of your mate, easily recognized in your numerology profiles. The reasons you love and admire your mate are unique to both of you. The things that drive you batty are right there in comparison as well, and these have remedies that appear in the Life Lesson, Blessing, and Life Path areas.

With a good set of tools, you can avoid the pitfalls of repeating old behaviors, having conversations that don't seem to get beyond a stall out point, and begin to have a dialog that is geared to the way the other can hear it. Your profiles will give you the key ways to present your feelings, desires, and reasons, and really hear theirs.

Life Lessons reveal where one of you has such an easy time of it and can't understand why the other has so much difficulty. Seeing this in black and white has a way of lending more compassion and patience during those times when the challenges are really up and rolling. It even makes it easier to help, without becoming patronizing or condescending. These skills will show up in the 6's (compassion and selflessness), 5's (curiosity and emotions), 7's (the introvert), 8's (the "all business" mindset), and the 9's (the universal humanitarian, big picture person).

If you or your partner are in a contest over who is really in charge of personal choices, you'll get a good set of tools from your profiles, to take the wheel without having to fight for it, or stop trying to do all the driving. With a good set of 2's and 11's, some good practical people skills will help. With 3's, creative options will come up. A new idea will cut through that boxed in feeling. Some good 4's will help set up step by step tasks that accumulate and compile the final outcome.

With the profiles side by side, it becomes easier to see who is going to need the extra TLC when it comes to careers, budgets, social calendars, and just plain getting along while you're doing them. Keeping the airwaves open between you is a lot smoother when you know where the hot buttons are and how to get around them.

An abundance of 5's will make for a loaded set of hot buttons. These people can work really well as entrepreneurs, but it can be rough on a partner. Looking at the 4's and 6's, you can see how clearly their "space" is defined. If they've got a 7 lesson, they may be running on intuition, and not have much conscious awareness of where they're headed until they get there. They're learning to "just do it", which forces their partner to fill in the blanks... with a high probability of misunderstandings.

Trusting your intuition is fine when it's directed toward your own goals, but it's counter-productive when it pulls your beloved away from theirs. Numerology gives you both a base that allows some wiggle room. Things get handled when the timing window is wide open, and everyone feels more relaxed as a result. Having your own feelings of what's important for you honored by your partner makes for more intimacy. Honoring theirs as well makes them feel more like giving you the freedom to rely on your own sense of timing. When it comes to celebrating your successful achievements, you'll have a companion who feels they are a valued part of your team.
